Social Distancing?

Welcome to my second newsletter and a big thank you to all you lovely readers who have signed up! I truly appreciate your support.

Well, how much has changed since the last time I wrote? Thanks to this horrible virus which has been spreading across the globe, many of our lives have been turned upside down. I hope you and your families are managing to keep safe.

Despite the challenges our new way of living has imposed, I haven't been idle from a writing perspective. 'One Hot Wynter's Night' was released in early April and has been selling really well, which is pleasing. And I've recently set up a pre-release of my sixteenth erotic romance novel 'I put a spell on you', which becomes available in mid-May (at which point the price will rise, so I advise that you grab it now if you're interested!). I've provided the links, just in case! My next focus is on producing the fifth instalment of the Daniel Lawson Series. If all goes well, I'll be looking to publish this in the summer. I am planning to coincide publication with a free giveaway of the first book in the series (First Love, Second Chance), so I will try and drop you a quick email when that is available, so you don't miss out.

Work in Progress

Working with a British voice actor, I have been closely involved with the production of the audio book version of 'To Love, Honour and Oh Pay', which is very exciting. It has also provided me with an interesting insight into just how much work goes into their making! I hit the "publish" button about ten minutes ago, so it should be live at some point this month!

As I mentioned previously, I always have multiple new books being written concurrently. This allows me to build the storylines over a number of months which is important, because a lot of inspiration comes to me during my downtime. Two books are currently capturing the majority of my attention. These are the fifth instalment of the Daniel Lawson series, and a Reverse Harem (for those of you not up with the lingo, this term refers to a story with one woman and multiple men). The latter is a little outside of the normal genre I write within, so we'll just have to see how things go! But you have to challenge yourself sometimes, don't you? It will be set in a snowy Dartmoor landscape - another challenge to write about, when the weather is warm! Alongside that, I continue to work on commissions, as well as the structure of future stories.

Prize Draw Winners

March Debra from Great Britain

April Paul from America

May Antoinette from South Africa

Each winner has received an ebook version of one of my novels.

Life

Life for us in the UK has been considerably different, having been on lockdown since 23rd March. From a personal perspective, having a four year old attached to me at all times has been an additional challenge and I certainly have a renewed sense of awe for the teaching profession!

We are now well and truly into Spring and have been enjoying some absolutely gorgeous days, between the occasional rain shower! As well as writing, I've been busy getting produce growing in my greenhouse and raised beds. Mice and the occasional frost are my current issues!

I'd like to offer my congratulations to the most recent monthly prize draw winners, Debra, Paul and Antoinette. My next newsletter will be issued in August, so until then, all the very best to you, and stay safe x
